FEDERAL DP EXPO

The Ninth Annual Conference and Exposition for the Federal ADP Community
April 12-14, 1983 • Washington DC Convention Center • Washington, D.C.

January 21, 1983

Good afternoon,

Registration forms are on their way to you for the 9th Annual Federal DP Expo. As a past attendee to this important show, I think you'll agree it's the most exciting and informative show held in Washington.

For nine years, the federal community has relied on Federal DP Expo to lead the way. You know you can count on us to bring you the manufacturers and suppliers of the most advanced technology the computer industry has to offer.

Here you can keep abreast of leading edge technology in computer hardware, software and services. Everything that will help you increase your organization's efficiency and productivity.

This year more than 150 exhibitors will demonstrate the latest and most sophisticated systems for information processing, data communications, networking, office automation and telecommunications.

In addition, our Conference, widely recognized as an outstanding learning experience, offers more than 40 sessions. Educational direction that will explore such topics as...Managing Software Development...Exploiting Micro Capabilities...Integrating Office Systems...and much, much more!

The challenge facing federal ADP and MIS professionals, like you, is awesome. Federal DP Expo will help you meet this challenge head on with new ideas, new products and new services.

I look forward to seeing you there!

Sincerely,

Sheldon G. Adelson
President

P.S. Remember, the registration forms for Federal DP Expo are on their way. However, I'd like you to mark the dates on your calendar today: April 12-14, 1983 in the Washington D.C. Convention Center.
